

TRENDS!

Greece lines up kamikaze drone production with Paramount

Greek state company Hellenic Defense Systems is gearing up for the local production of long-range loitering munitions by partnering with South Africa's Paramount Group

Rheinmetall pitches unmanned mothership full of tiny attack drones

German defense contractor Rheinmetall unveiled plans last month for a drone envisioned to carry up to eight loitering munitions and release them close to their targets.

Ukraine's Innovation Minister Shares Inside Scoop On Army Of Drones, Cyberwar And Digitalization

Ukrainian Minister Mykhailo Fedorov is fostering efforts to help Ukrainian companies develop and indigenously mass produce drones and drone software, seeking to bring new capabilities to the table.

MUST READ! – Ukraine Special

The Key Is Pilots, Not Drones: Ukraine's Escadrone On The Skill Of Flying FPV Kamikazes

FPV kamikaze is about pilots, not about drones. While consumer drones can be flown by novices with no training, an FPV drone requires considerable skill. If you want to use it like a weapon, you have to train for a month. Hitting a moving target at high speed is very difficult.

Ukraine Is Preparing For Drone Attacks By Dropping Training Grenades On Its Troops

At least one Ukrainian unit looks to be conducting novel dual-purpose training that lets personnel hone their skills in using small weaponized drones and allows troops below to get a very realistic understanding of this growing threat.

